meshes that allows liquid to pass through while trapping solids in the device." The title Nectar in a Sieve conveys imagery for a powerful idea often touched upon in the novel: enjoy the pleasures of life before they slip away. It also alludes to a line from "Work without Hope" by English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge: "Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve, / And Hope without an object cannot live."

Rukmani indicts both the industrialization of the villages, represented by the tannery, and the laws of land ownership that impoverish and displace peasants like her and Nathan. In Nectar in a Sieve, hunger breeds thieves, prostitutes, murderers, and subhuman beasts. Not only nature's whims but also the choices of an unjust society produce the shameful misery of starvation.
